

Grey District Council

ENGAGING A PROFESSIONAL OR TRADES PERSON

Preparing documentation for consent applications requires a detailed knowledge of the Building Code, the District Plan, development and building/planning processes. Good documentation provides a solid foundation for the success of your project.

It should speed up processing and approval times and provides an accurate historical record that can be used later when further work, repair or maintenance is needed. Many applicants feel they are able to complete the required documentation themselves, but often find that the standard of presentation and quality of information is insufficient for Council to process the consent.

Engaging a design professional early on in your project will help in submitting a hassle-free application. Designers, architects and planners are experienced in the documentation of building projects, the building consent process, and the resource consent process. Depending on the nature of your project you may also require an engineer to design some of the structural elements of your building or site work.

Following is a list of some professionals who work on the West Coast for your reference. This list is not intended to be exhaustive as there is a huge wealth of expertise at your disposal throughout New Zealand.
